
Server Zombie Plague Gata Facut By T Tre3fla X !!HOT!!

It runs as a service and I have seen that I can just kill it or start it from the task manager. What does the Error, as well as how can I get rid of it? A: The first error that you are seeing is caused by a max_allowed_packet issue on your MySQL server. The issue is something to do with how large the packet has to be. You can define a variable to define the packet size in your my.cnf for your MySQL servers. This variable can be set to the total size that you want or you can just set it to some fraction of the total size that you want to allow. The second error that you are seeing is somewhat more insidious and could have a lot of causes. There is a max_allowed_packet issue that is from the client connecting to your server. Can you confirm that there is a process on your server that is connected to mysql? If so, you need to kill that process and then restart MySQL.
