The Olympic format in the 1991 event for this distance was 1,000 m, and the same qualification system was followed for the 1990–2000 events, with the exception of the 1996 Games, which was held at the older intersprint format. The event was first introduced to the Olympics as a men's dual meet event in 1952. It was not used at the 1956 Summer Olympics as the team event was held in that year but returned in 1964 after being held in the 1948 and 1952 Games. The replacement for the team event was to be the 1,500 m, with the 2,000 m being a continuation of the longstanding tradition of running two events for men.
