Smart Objects An important feature of Photoshop is the ability to insert nondestructive layers. This tool enables you to create many layers, which you can further manipulate. The process is known as layer blending. To create a nondestructive layer, select the required image, select the Layer menu, and choose Create a Smart Object (see Figure 3-15). Figure 3-15. Smart Objects provide the ability to add (and later delete) layers. When you use the Layer menu to create a Smart Object, you create an XML document. This is why the name smart comes from XML. The Document Info inspector is used to manipulate the XML document. This includes the following: * Creating a new XML document * Renaming a document * Creating a new layer * Setting a layer's opacity * Making a layer visible or invisible * Renaming a layer * Setting the format of the layer * Adding a layer mask * Using the Layer Comps feature * Scaling a layer * Combining layers * Moving layers * Linking layers For more information on the different types of layers and layer masks, see the sidebar, "Layer Types: Which Layer Is Right for Me?" Some of these functions are not available while you are in the Layers panel and the Photoshop workspace. These functions can be called from the Tools panel. For example, to change the layer's opacity, look for the Overlay item, and click or drag to the layer. You can also use the Curves dialog box to change the opacity. There are also several useful keyboard shortcuts in the Layer menu and the Layers panel. These are covered in Chapter 6. To create a new layer, choose Layer⇒New Layer or press the New Layer key on the keyboard. Press Shift+Ctrl+N (Shift+Option+N) to open the Layer Comps dialog box, where you can make layer-related adjustments. Many layers are nondestructive, which means that you can add, delete, and move layers around. You can also change layer blending modes. After you've created a Smart Object, you can do anything with it that you can do with an image.

Norwich United goalkeeper Max Wheatley has been released by the Canaries. The 23-year-old featured in Norwich's pre-season friendly at Colchester United on Wednesday, but manager Paul Lambert has decided he does not have the experience required to be an Under-23s goalkeeper. Wheatley made a total of five appearances for the Canaries – all in pre-season friendly matches – and is free to seek a new club. The stopper had originally been signed on loan from Southampton at the start of last season, and made his senior debut against Walsall last December. Paul Gallagher[Alterations in the function of the immune system as a specific feature of the adaptation to long-term exposure to a high-altitude environment]. Functional characteristics of the HLA-DR+ lymphocyte subpopulations and the T-cell subpopulations of the blood of humans living in the high-altitude region of the Pamir were studied by flow cytometry. Lymphocytes and T-cells were shown to decrease by 16-27% as compared to the reference values. By enhanced antigenic stimulation of T-cells by the antigens polyvalent S-G and phytohemagglutinin, cytotoxic activity of the effector cells increased. Enhanced activity of T-cell subpopulations was found by the study of the class I HLA-DR antigen expression, the proliferation test and the T-cell receptor function. It is concluded that peculiarities of the immune system of the population residing in the high-altitude region are aimed at preventing autoimmune diseases and acceleration of an inflammatory process in case of infection of the B-Cells.Suspended Animation By CNET All eyes are on the commercial development that sits at the heart of the Juno space probe, which might land on the largest, farthest-flung world in our solar system. The information it sends back to Earth will provide a treasure trove of new insights into the changing climate of Jupiter. But even if the probe successfully lands, a much bigger solar power system will be required to supply electricity during the mission. This may be the way of the future. Drexel researchers have built a working prototype for a cheap, large-scale solar system that could power manned missions to Mars or even our Earth-Moon system. It's the work of Robert Heinz, a researcher in applied physics at Drexel. With funding from the

Memory and long-term potentiation induced by electrical stimulation of the hippocampal formation of the cat. Field potentials were recorded in the hippocampal formation of freely moving cats, during continuous electrical stimulation (SE) and repetitive electrical stimulation (RE), at frequencies corresponding to theta rhythm and to beta-frequencies, in cases when the effect of conditioning stimulations was studied. When SE was applied, simultaneously with the last of a train of conditioning stimuli, two field potential components, named EPSP and IPSP, were recorded. The EPSP and the IPSP had different latencies in the CA1 and CA3 pyramidal cells. The latencies were longer in dorsal pyramidal cells than in ventral pyramidal cells. The amplitudes and the latencies of the EPSP were the same or very similar to those evoked by conditioning stimuli applied separately. The latencies of the EPSP and IPSP were shorter in the cases with a suppression (cutaneous stimulation of the neck) than in the cases without this suppression. The amplitudes of both components were similar to the amplitudes of the EPSP and IPSP evoked by conditioning stimulations at a lower frequency. The amplitudes of the EPSP and IPSP were the same or slightly smaller than the amplitudes of the EPSP and IPSP evoked by conditioning stimulations given separately. In the cases with a suppression, only the IPSP was recorded. In the cases without suppression, the EPSP and IPSP were evoked only occasionally, and often the IPSP appeared in the absence of the EPSP. The EPSP and IPSP were not evoked by unconditioned stimuli. At the frequencies which induced a long-lasting potentiation (LTP) of the evoked potential components, both the EPSP and IPSP were recorded. The amplitude of the EPSP increased at the frequency of theta rhythm, with no change of its latency, and the EPSP decreased with a higher frequency. The amplitude of the IPSP increased with a higher frequency. The latency of the IPSP decreased with a higher frequency. The effect of RE consisted in a prolongation of the amplitudes of the EPSP and IPSP which persisted after cessation of RE. In case of the reversal of the polarity of stimulation, the amplitude of the EPSP was smaller than that of IPSP. The reduction of the amplitude of the EPSP was more pronounced, the latencies were the same or slightly smaller than those of the EPSP evoked
