I apologize for this question being so elementary, but I'm very new to complex analysis, and am looking for some assistance with the definition of the "standard complex structure on \mathbb{C}^n ". If we fix some basis $\{e_1, \dots, e_n\}$, then the standard complex structure on \mathbb{C}^n is the one such that $\mathcal{J}(e_1, \dots, e_n) = (-1, \dots, -1, \dots, e_1, \dots, e_n)$. And we say that we use a compatible complex structure when there is some linear map $\mathcal{J}: \mathbb{C}^n \rightarrow \mathbb{C}^n$ such that $\mathcal{J}(A \cdot B) = \mathcal{J}(A) \cdot \mathcal{J}(B)$ and $\mathcal{J}^2 = -I$ (the latter being the equivalent in Linear Algebra of the former). So, my question is: is there an actual structure on \mathbb{C}^n which comes with the standard complex structure (i.e., is it the one we get by restricting the structure of an algebra on \mathbb{C}^n to \mathbb{C}^n)? Thanks in advance! A: The only structure compatible with the standard complex structure in \mathbb{C}^n is the product structure. The report was based on nearly 7,000 teachers — a quarter of whom described themselves as gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender — from more than 50 states and the District of Columbia. More than a third said they have experienced some form of bullying at school, based
